

4th Annual Traincan, Inc. Excellence In Public Health Award

TrainCan, Inc. – the source for food safety - is pleased to accept nominations from the foodservice, retail grocery industry and the public health sector with regard to a public health inspector who has exhibited leadership and an extraordinary commitment to public safety particularly in the area of food handling.

This award is presented annually at the Excellence in Public Health Awards Luncheon held during Canada's national food safety conference. (www.foodsafetyforum.ca)

This is a chance for the public health sector to be acknowledged for the work that they do everyday and the important responsibility that goes along with it.

Deadline for nominations:
December 14, 2007

To qualify for nominations

Candidates must:

- Be employed in one of Canada's provincial health units
- Have spent time in the field during calendar 2007 performing inspections
- Demonstrate leadership and be a positive role model
- Have provided an exemplary contribution to his/her constituents and the community at large

Consider the following information when filling out nomination forms

Sometimes Public Health Inspectors carry a heavy load.

- What load has your nominee been carrying in 2007?
- How did they manage?
- How were they able to provide a high level of service despite the load?

Sometimes due to extenuating circumstances Public Health Inspector are under extra scrutiny.

- What circumstance did your nominee have to deal with.
- Was your nominee been targeted by media, a special interest group, a company.
- How did they respond?

Sometimes Public Health Inspectors can help save a "sinking ship"?

- What particular concern faced this business and why did it need to be helped?
- What did the Public Health Inspector do?
- What above and beyond assistance did they offer? How effective was it?
